

Bio – Bill Haring – Councillor

I'm Bill Haring — proud dad, outdoor enthusiast, sitting councillor, and, at the end of the day, just some guy you bump into around town.

My family has deep roots in the valley. I spent my summers here visiting my grandparents, enjoying the rural lifestyle and community that make Clearwater special. Eleven years ago I was able to move here, and I've been living the dream since.

My education is in political science and project management. My career has included roles in emergency management, paramedicine, construction and health administration.

I bring a practical, critical-thinking approach to council, and a talent for generating creative solutions to difficult problems. I believe local government should solve problems, and stop creating unnecessary barriers. That means reducing red tape, removing obstacles to growth, and making it easier for people to build, innovate, invest, and succeed in our community. Your local government should be behind you, not in your way."
