

Bio for Abiye Amabeoku

Abiye Amabeoku is a mother of two young children passionate about sustainable community development and building a resilient future. Originally from Nigeria, she came to Canada at age 18 to pursue a degree in Environmental Science at Simon Fraser University and has called Canada home for nearly fourteen years.

After spending almost twelve years in the Lower Mainland, Abiye and her husband Franklin relocated to Clearwater to build their future in a community where their children could grow up connected to nature. Abiye often says that Clearwater chose them through the unusual kindness they experienced upon arrival.

Abiye holds a Bachelor of Science in Environmental Science, a GIS Certificate, a Project Management Professional (PMP) certification and is currently pursuing a master's degree in Sustainability. Anchored by her faith in Jesus, she believes in servant leadership, and inclusive collaboration that strengthens families and supports growth. She enjoys kayaking, exploring the outdoors, and trying new recipes with her family.
